Navy and Marine Corps Notes.

If you want to find any of the Navy or Marine Corps officers still in town these hot days go to the Center market Saturday morning and there, either inside of the building or strolling in and out along the way of the country wagons, you will be sure to find your man.

This is particularly true if he is an admiral or one of the older officers, as the custom is quite an old one, the only difference being that formerly you would be sure to find your officer followed by his man or boy bearing a large market basket, in which was carried home the morning's purchases, and now the purchases, while quite as liberally made, are delivered by the dealers. If the vegetables and berries are purchased along with the fresh-laid eggs from the veritable country man or woman outside the market they are officer's particular butler or fishmonger within the building.

If you do not believe this just go down to the market some sunny Saturday morning and you will find yourself buying right and left and every last one of the older officers of the Navy and Marine Corps, for good old-fashioned customs die hard with the service.

Rear Admiral Reginald Nicholson, United States Navy, accompanied by his wife and daughter, left the city last week for an extended motor trip to the generally pleasant place stopping where they fancied and for as long a time, so that it is not likely that their home, 1828 Jefferson place, will be opened again until well into the autumn.

Mrs. Nicholson is one of the best tennis players in Washington, and has been practicing every day in the Connecticut avenue court, and she is little if anything behind the admiral at golf, as they play on the Chevy Chase Club course has frequently demonstrated.
